Resident warns about United Nations scam

Do you know who your friends are? Have you spoken to them lately and not just on Facebook?

Holly Carrothers, a Drayton Valley resident, wants the community to know of a recent Facebook scam whereby a hacker from Centerville managed to pretend to be a friend of hers on Facebook.

The hacker (pretending to be her friend) said there is United Nations grant money available and she, just won a large portion of it – and they even delivered it right to her door, accompanied by two armed guards.

The hacker persuaded Carrothers to receive money by sending in lawyer's fees, which amounted to $1,432.90 for processing and the money too, would be delivered right to her door.

Unfortunately, Carrothers found out the hard way that wasn't the case. When she contacted her friend, replied that somebody hacked into her Facebook account, and at that point Carrothers realized there was no money coming in.

After attempting to get the money back through the local Money Mart, she was told the money had already been cashed. But the Business Development and Sales division would contact their parent division.

She also went to the RCMP, who opened a file, but couldn't do anything because it is something they don't investigate.

Carrothers then encountered the hacker on Facebook, "old him she knew it was a scam and she demanded the money back. He said he would it would cost another $200 in processing fees to get the money back, plus another $500 in IRS taxes.

"The hacker does not respond to any Facebook messages after 4:30 p.m. on any given day," said Carrothers.

You have no idea what you have done to me. I am a single mother with a family. Send me my money back.

Carrothers posted to the scammer on Facebook.

"I wasn't in a very good place for the first few days. As far as I know, the hacker is hitting on friends in the area, so I don't want to tell anyone who knows about this scam, the greater the chance these guys will be caught. Because of the hacking, I don't know if the FBI will no longer be on Facebook or Messenger, so be careful. Confirm everything. Phone up your friends and ask them. The FBI will not want our money back," stressed Carrothers.

Carrothers said the name of the 'agent' is David Mark and the lawyer that he uses online to prosecute is David Mark.

So far, the fraud unit has followed their facebook account to Centerville, Texas where their zip code is 76701. Carrothers' phone number to Drayton Valley does not show an Alberta 780 prefix.

Carrothers also recommends that anyone who enters this scammer to take care of their money.

The following has been issued by the United Nations:

Provincial Court news brief: Energy company fined $100,000

An energy company and its partners were slapped with a $100,000 fine in Drayton Valley Provincial Court on July 28, including victim fine surcharge (CJ 100000), for failing to ensure that a drilling rig on the site outside of Drayton Valley and struck a worker on his left foot. The resulting accident amputated the worker's foot and left him with a permanent injury. The worker has had his remaining three toes amputated due to injury.

The resulting accident took place on January 31 of 2013. Since then, the man has recovered and is in good medical condition and is now working as a general contractor.

The company is Energy Services Corp., Nova Scotia Drilling Limited Partnership and Deetstone Exploration Limited were all charged under various sections of the Occupational Health and Safety Act following the incident.

The lawyer for Nova Scotia Drilling, C. Menach, charged the company on behalf of the company and stated that since the company was not aware of the accident at the various work sites, a priority with one-day safety meetings set up prior to every work site was to ensure that the workers were safe.

Before Judge J. Gendron rendered his decision, the court heard the circumstances surrounding the accident. The company was drilling a well for specialized Procections Branch, OHS Regulatory Unit at Alberta Energy and Solicitor General, reported the accident. The company was drilling a well, using a drilling rig from a third party, when the accident occurred.

Funding for the Max Center approved by the town

Mamta Lulla
Western Review

Drayton Valley Town council approved the Max Center's request for funding of $7,200 at the recent council meeting. Administration had recommended denying the request as town funds for capital undertakings have already been budgeted.

Coun. Nicole Nadeau said she supports the request; however, she wants the community to know that there is a budget in place and she would like to see such requests be part of that process.

Mayor Glenn McLean agreed with Nadeau's comments. EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT BYLAW GETS FIRST READING Drayton Valley Town council gave first reading to Emergency Management bylaw at the town council meeting on Aug. 5.

The bylaw is an updated version of the existing one, as it provides detailed direction and control of the town's emergency operations. If passed the town council will be members of the emergency management committee with the mayor being the chair. The committee will be responsible to declare, renew or terminate a state of local emergency. OLD HW PICKUP DESIGN Conceptual design for the old HW Pickup Grounds was approved in the recent town council meeting. That particular design includes the bus hub as well. Drayton Valley Town Chief

Administration Officer Manny Deol said Wild Rose School Division is yet to get back to the town with a green light. Wild Rose School Division confirmed in an e-mail that they are waiting to present the full agreement for approval to the board of trustees and that will happen at the Aug. 18 board meeting. To that comment Mayor Glenn McLean noted that the town is as ready as it can be. Coun. Graham Long said the town is seeking funding on the project. The town had approached Brazeau County to help fund the bus hub, and the county had declined the request.

Increasing youth involvement

Mamta Lulla
Western Review

Town of Drayton Valley has been looking to improve youth involvement in municipal government decision-making.

At the government and priorities committee meeting on Aug. 5 administration put forward some options to increase youth involvement. One of the options considered was consulting a Calgary-based organization that specializes in that area. Sustainability coordinator Danette Mould recommended council consult with the organization on the project for 40 hours which would mean $3,000 for the town. DEVELOPMENT OF SERVICE ROAD In discussions with the owner at the site of Sekura Auction Mart, administration had been asked to ask town council about the development of the service road on a local improvement levy basis. Deputy Mayor Dean Shultz said he would like to see administration come forward with a policy that council will use to decide when to allow such a request and under what circumstances. He said currently there is no consistency in place.

My concern is that we're picking favourites allowing some developers (over others), referring to past examples. Coun. Debra Boserup said she would like such requests to be part of budget discussions. Council decided to talk more about the policy in private and have a decision for Sekura Auction Mart at the next council meeting.

Mayor Glenn McLean (left) presented an iPad Mini to Janelle Russell who participated in this year's Canada Day festivities and was drawn winner. During the poll residents answered many questions such as what is Drayton Valley's biggest challenge as a municipality and how would they like the council to address the challenges.

Still plenty to do this summer

We're entering the second week of August, and despite the fact that retail stores are heavily stocked with school supplies, there are still three more weeks of summer to enjoy - provided Mother Nature co-operates.

Yes, we've had rainstorms with plinky sized hail stones, but we haven't gotten the monstrous thunder and hail storms that the City of Calgary and southern communities have had to endure. Is it global warming causing this wacky weather? More likely it's El Niño or La Niña kicking up a commotion.

Fortunately, Drayton Valley has an indoor pool with plenty of activities planned for the rest of the month in addition to recreational swimming in the afternoon. Summer camps for kids of all ages are continuing at the Omplex and two reading programs are also ongoing, based out of the Rotary Children's Library. A new Community Initiative Reading Program has children visiting seniors' residences, long term care, and even the Cause for Critics shelter, where children read to the kittens.

For more formal learning, gymnastics and dance lessons have been underway this summer, and will begin again in earnest this fall.

There's no lack of recreation for adults, either. Biking, hiking and snowshoeing groups are visible throughout the year, and boxing and archery are still as popular as they were decades ago.

One last blast of fun is scheduled to take place on August 27 courtesy of Communities in Bloom and other organizations who are planning a fun-filled themed movie night complete with decorations, fun, food, dancing and games.

Shortly after that, Community Registration Night will be held on Tuesday, September 1 at the Omplex, Omni 3 pad from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. It is here that parents can register their children in sports and other recreational activities, and may sign up for some of their own recreational fun. More details about Registration Night will be announced shortly.

With so many activities going on throughout the community this summer, there should be no excuse for the dreaded whine usually heard around this time of year, "I'm bored. There's nothing to do."

This is an extremely vibrant, busy and caring community with active young families and a busy 55 plus recreation centre, not to mention all the recreation areas located throughout Bonanza County, such as walking and ski trails, horseback trails, and several nearby campgrounds.

Drayton Valley residents and businesses should be proud of all the amenities it has, thanks to the organizations and companies that support them throughout the year. Not every community in this province is as well-equipped as this one is, so keep up the good work, everybody.

Thoughts on vehicles

Through the assistance of our local Toyota dealership in Drayton Valley, I am now the proud owner of a newer but fully functioning pre-owned car.

I never really thought about all the inconveniences I experienced while driving my old car until difficult driving situations cropped up from time to time. My power windows haven't been working for a few years now, which isn't bad in the winter but in the summer it's like driving in a fish bowl when the sun is beating down. Plus, the air conditioner barely works.

Last year, the hose to the windshield washer fluid container disconnected, leaving me with two choices, and no, fixing it wasn't an option at the time. My winter method of cleaning off the windshield was using hand-fuls of snow to wipe the glass. Not every community in this province is as well-equipped as this one is, so keep up the good work, everybody.

However, a bug storm on the windshield last weekend literally had me in a blind panic. What cleaner and paper towels with what? What if I couldn't see while driving down the highway and vehicles are closing toward me with their bright lights? What if I drive off the road because I can't see?

When it gets to the point where a vehicle, mine or anybody's, becomes a chemical hazard leaving fluid stains on the road ranging from oil to engine coolant or automatic transmission fluid, or puts the driver in danger if the fluid is leaking, it's time to replace it.

Prior to arriving in Drayton Valley, I was not in a financial position to replace my vehicle, and I'm grateful that Emma hung together as long as she did. But for my own safety, and the safety of others, it's time to let her go and move on with my life.

I just have one problem left - or rather four of them - four month old, barely used 16 inch long-term tires I put on Emma that I haven't finished paying for yet. Any takers? You know where to find me.

Cathy's Comments
Cathy Weetman

I first thought was rain turned out to be hundreds of mosquitoes or muds hitting the windshield, drastically reducing my visibility. Had I used the wipers at the time, I would have ended up with a solid sheet of bug parts across the entire windshield. I was able to pull off the highway into fields, where I whipped out my bottle of glass cleaner and some paper towels and cleaned off the mess, but the windshield still wasn't perfect.

I made it home, though, but the "what if's" got me thinking. What if I didn't have glass

Get your dancing shoes ready for fall

A new dance year is approaching rather quickly.

Mommy and Me dance program at Miss Joanne's School of Dance is open for registration.

The dance program is for children from 18 months old going up to three years.

"Mommy and Me we call it that, but honestly throughout the year dads come, grandpas and grandmas come, whoever wants to come can come, because parents work right?"

said Instructor Fallon Wood at Miss Joanne's School of Dance.

The dance program helps children at that age.

The kids learn direction and creative movements. We use nursery rhymes and games to help them learn as well. We do different colors, all different things that help them with learning right at that age," she said.

The classes are an opportunity for both children and parents to mingle.

"It's good for children at that age too because they socialize with other children. Lots of children at that age don't have siblings or cousins and they are not in school yet. It's nice for the parents too because they get a social aspect of it as well, and you meet some other parents," said Wood.

She agreed at 18 months old, children are young but she assured that classes give both parents and children a chance to bond.

"At 18 months they are a little young but the parents are there to help them and guide them and they enjoy it with the music on,"

she said.

The program is nine months long starting September to May, and parents can enroll for however long they wish.

"We had one girl start that did the entire program last year for the nine months, and the growth you watch in children is a big change," she said.

The dance school is also offering other types of classes like jazz, ballet, hip hop, lyrical, modern etc. A program that starts at three years of age which is a step at three Mommy and Me, called Music and Movement, is also open for registration.

Registration Night is on Aug. 27 at Miss Joanne's School of Dance located on 51 St. on Aug. 27 from 4:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. Registration will also be offered at the Openhouses on Sept. 1 from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. as part of the Community Registration night.

For fees and any other information contact the school at 780-621-2430 or on Facebook at Miss Joanne's School of Dance - Drayton Valley.

Music and Movement is a class for children (left) who are three years and older at Miss Joanne's School of Dance. The program is a step up from Mommy and Me that starts at 18 months going up to three years.

Federal election called

Special to the Western Review

Stephen Harper has begun the mid-summer marathon that will be the longest federal election campaign in recent history.

Harper emerged from Rideau Hall August 2 confirming he had asked Gov. Gen. David Johnston to dissolve Parliament for a general election to be held Monday, Oct. 19.

Speaking after his meeting with Johnston, Harper emphasized the need for a strong hand on the economy and issues of security, including the "violent global jihadist movement" represented by ISIS.

Canada's Prime Minister Stephen Harper speaks to reporters after asking Governor General David Johnston on Sunday to dissolve Parliament. (Blair Cable/Reuters)

"Canadians will make a critical decision about the direction of our country, a decision with real consequences, a decision about who has the proven expertise today to keep our economy strong and our country safe," Harper said. "This is not time for risky plans that could harm our future," he added.

"It is time to say the course and stick to our plan."

Pressed by reporters why he launched the campaign so far in advance of the fixed election date, which boosts the cost to taxpayers, Harper said, "Everybody knows the election date and the campaign of the other parties, as near as I can tell, have already begun."

"I feel very strongly... that these campaigns need to be conducted under the rules of the law. That the money come from the parties themselves, not from government resources, not from government resources or taxpayer resources. In terms of the advantages this party has, I feel a better organized political party, and better supported by Canadians — those advantages exist calling this campaign is making sure that we are all operating within the rules and not using taxpayers' money directly," said Harper.

Speaking in Gatineau, Que., NDP Leader Tom Mulcair also expressed the economy as a defining issue of the campaign.

"Canadians have a clear choice," he said. "Four more years of Mr. Harper and the Conservatives or my plan for change. We will kick-start the economy and get Canadians back to work. This is our number one priority," he said.

"Wages are falling, incomes are stagnant and household debt is skyrocketing... middle class families are working harder than ever but can't get ahead," Mulcair said.

The NDP leader also used his speech to introduce himself to Canadians who may not know him, stressing his upbringing, his values and his years in politics. Unlike Harper, Mulcair did not take any questions from reporters.

Most recent polls have shown Mulcair and the NDP leading or in a virtual tie with Harper and the Conservatives. Liberal Party Leader Justin Trudeau launched his campaign in Vancouver, where he aimed his pitch at middle-class voters.

"If people want change in this country, it is because the economy is not working for them," he said. Trudeau also used his speech to take swags at both Harper and Mulcair, saying Harper's plan had "failed" and Mulcair's is a "mirage." You want change that works for you," Trudeau said.

Green Party Leader Elizabeth May, speaking in her British Columbia riding of Saanich—Gulf Islands, chastised Harper for the length of the campaign.

"What isn't right is to claim that the taxpayers aren't subsidizing this election. It's going to cost Canadians tens of millions of dollars more," she said.

Gilles Duceppe, the leader of the Bloc Québécois, spoke in Montreal, saying he was struck by the number of young people who have joined the party.

"I want to help those young people to play their role," he said.

Voters will get their first chance to see the party leaders together in action on Aug. 6 during a debate hosted by Maclean's magazine in Toronto.

HISTORIC LENGTH

The eleventh campaign, which will last 11 weeks, or 77 days, will be one of the longest in the country's history.

According to The Canadian Press, only Canada's first two election campaigns were longer. The 1867 campaign lasted 81 days, while the 1872 campaign went for 90 days. Back then, voting was staggered over the country for a period of several months. The longest race in recent history was a 74-day campaign back in 1920.

A long campaign is seen as benefiting the Conservatives, who are acknowledged to have the biggest war chest.

During a typical 37-day election period, each party can spend a maximum of $25 million. For each additional day, that limit is increased by 1/37th, or an extra $675,000, meaning an 11-week campaign would allow parties to spend more than $50 million. Individual candidates also get an additional $2,700 a day to add to their usual limit of approximately $100,000.

A longer campaign will also cost Canadian taxpayers more. By Elections Canada's estimate, a traditional five-week, 35-day campaign costs about $375 million to run. Parties are also reimbursed for half the money they spend during an election campaign.

The Conservatives under Harper are seeking a fourth consecutive mandate, while Mulcair and Trudeau are both entering their first federal election campaigns as the leaders of their respective parties.

As Harper and Mulcair both highlighted, the management of the economy will be a key campaign issue. Canadian economic growth has stumbled in recent months. Statistics Canada reported Friday that the total value of the country's economy declined by 0.2 per cent in May, the fifth consecutive monthly slide.

At the dissolution of Parliament, the Conservatives held 159 of the 308 seats in the House of Commons, compared with the NDP's 55 and the Liberal Party's 96. The Bloc Québécois, the Forces at Démocratie party and the Green Party had two seats each. There were also eight independent MPs and four vacant seats.

However, there are more seats up for grabs this time round. Following the release of 2011 census population numbers, federal electoral boundaries were revised, which led to an increase in the number of seats in the Commons to 338.

The new ridings are located in: Ontario: 15 more seats (21 seats in total); British Columbia: 5 more seats (42 seats in total); Alberta: 6 more seats (54 seats in total); Quebec: 3 more seats (78 seats in total). The seat total in all the other provinces and the territories.

Ten meaningful ways to make a difference

News Canada

(NC) Did you know that you can make an impact on generations to come by planning a future gift to the charity that you are passionate about?

One example is SickKids. Charitable gifts have helped the hospital with research breakthroughs of the kind that have made it a leader in children's health. Every year, more than 100,000 children come to our hospital with hopes that we can solve their health issues with life-saving care. We're Dr. Garment, President and CEO of SickKids Foundation.

By planning a future gift (planning.sickkids.com) the hospital says you can make a major impact on the lives of the more than 100,000 children treated annually at the facility.

Here are 10 easy steps to leave a legacy and support a cause that matters to you:

1. Residual Bequest: A gift in your will allows you to make a tax-effective donation, and often eliminates the taxable impact on your beneficiaries. Residual gifts often have the largest impact by allowing you to gift a portion or percentage of your estate which is often much higher than would be possible during your lifetime.

2. Specific Bequest: You can also choose to leave a specific amount to a charity in your will. These beneficiaries are the first to receive funds once your estate is being administered.

3. Gifts of Securities: By donating appreciated stocks, mutual funds, stock options or bonds through shares, you pay no tax on the capital gains, receive a tax receipt for the fair market value of the securities and you can reduce your taxes.

4. Gifts of Life Insurance: This allows you to make a large donation at a relatively low cost. You can designate your charity of choice as owner and beneficiary of a new or existing policy to claim each future premium paid as a tax-deductible donation, give the charity a paid-up life insurance policy to receive an immediate tax receipt for its fair market value or simply designate a charity as a beneficiary.

5. Gifts of RRSPs/RRIFs: Retirement funds are one of the best ways to grow wealth during your lifetime, but one of the worst ways to transfer wealth to the next generation since they are among your most heavily taxed assets. By naming a charity as a beneficiary of your registered plan, you can make a gift which will benefit your charity of choice and other beneficiaries in your estate – and a receipt will reduce the taxes.

6. Gifts of Real Estate: Many charities accept gifts of property. You can donate the property outright by transferring ownership, place it in trust where you retain use for your lifetime, or you can gift it in your will. Charitable tax receipts are given for established fair market value at the time of the transfer of the property. Currently primary residences are exempt from capital gains tax and beginning in 2017, secondary residences, such as cottages or income properties will be exempt from capital gains tax.

7. Set up an Endowment Fund: An endowment fund is a perfect gift option for those who wish to have more control, flexibility and involvement with their donation. It will be permanently invested and the income may support a specific area of focus – whatever you believe should be long supported into the future. This gift creates a permanent, predictable source of revenue for the charity and the fund can be established in your own name or in honor of a loved one.

8. Gifts of Shares from a Private Corporation: Benefits to the charity include that donated shares may pay dividends and the charity may be able to sell the shares in the near term, or may hold some or all of them for an indefinite period. The donor receives an immediate donation receipt for the fair market value of the shares. This process will become easier with new legislation in 2017.

9. Stock Options: This is a common form of employee compensation, and also happens to be one of the most cost effective and tax-efficient ways to make a donation. By donating stock options, donors receive a tax receipt for the transfer value of the donation, and eliminate the capital gains tax.

10. Other assets: Items such as jewelry or artwork can also be a second way to support your cause. You receive the satisfaction of seeing the gift at work, now or in the future and you receive a receipt for the fair market value, as determined by a qualified appraiser.

Simple tips for softer, chewier cookies

News Canada

(NC) There's nothing sweeter than the joy of baking a fresh batch of cookies – especially the end results. Whether you're baking for family, friends or treating yourself to a tasty delight, consider these simple tips the next time you're pulling out the egg beaters and measuring cups to guarantee soft and chewy cookies every time.

Substitute margarine for butter: Margarine is the baker's best friend. It can be used straight from the fridge to help you make some of the softest and chewiest cookies around. Not only that, soft non-hydrogenated margarine, like Becel Buttery Taste margarine, contains 80 per cent less saturated fat than butter, and has zero trans-fat. It can be substituted on a 1:1 ratio in any recipe that calls for butter or oil.

Take your time with prep: Measure out ingredients beforehand to ensure you have exactly what you need. This will save time and avoid forgetting any steps.

Be creative: Think outside the recipe box and create your own custom cookies with Becel Anything Goes Cookie Dough! This kitchen tested bakery-style cookie dough is the perfect base to create all your favourite cookie recipes. Satisfy any craving by adding blueberries, cranberries, flavoured, cinnamon, chocolate chips, oatmeal or almonds. One "cookie" recipe, endless options!

Let it cool completely before taking a bite: Hands off – even after you remove your treats from the oven, flavours are still developing and textures are setting in.

Police seeking public's help

Submitted

The RCMP is seeking the public's help in the homicide investigation into the death of 22-year-old Mackenzie Leah Harris of Camrose whose body was found in a forested area within the Town of Calmar by a local resident who reported the findings to police in the early evening of Monday, August 3, 2015.

Mackenzie was reported missing to Leduc RCMP on Saturday, August 1, 2015 by a friend. Police efforts to locate her were ongoing at the time her body was discovered. The investigation thus far has led the Leduc RCMP and the RCMP's Major Crimes Unit to appeal to the public for anyone who may have seen or heard anything unusual, or may have residential video surveillance, in the area of Allen Park, in Leduc overnight, between July 31 and August 1, 2015, and to contact the Leduc RCMP at 780-890-7200. Eldorado School is 100 years old

This little educational gem was sent to the Western Review recently and we'd like to share it with you. Education arrived in Drayton Valley in 1915 when Roy Platts built the first school, using timber from the cedar dam workings. The school was a log structure, 30 feet by 20 feet, with a 10 feet by 12 feet porch, supported two feet off the ground on fire-killed posts, which were in ready supply. Sawdust was banked against the building to keep the floor warm, and it was named 'Eldorado' by Jack Tucker who had been working at a mine of that name in Yukon! The one room school with a coal/wood stove cost $500 and stood where the present Eldorado School is now.

ASK THE PROS...

WHAT SHOULD I CONSIDER WHEN CHOOSING FLOORING?

There are many things to consider when choosing the flooring. Flooring is the foundation of your home.

Choosing good products that will stand up to your lifestyle are important. What is also important is the substrate floor or the base floor of the home.

If you have a concrete floor, there will always be a dampness there, no concrete is ever truly dry. With this in mind, people often will choose warmer products to put on the concrete floor. If choosing carpet, a pad with a moisture barrier can help keep your carpet dry.

The moisture barrier is very important when doing standard laminate flooring on concrete. Laminate needs to be kept as dry as possible, even when there is a built in moisture barrier. A very effective way to do laminate is a basement, it is put down your poly first. Run the poly up the wall a few inches, install your laminate in the direction of or against as recommended. Once complete, put tape back up and use poly. Finishing the poly effect will help keep moisture below. If there are any water issues.

If doing a wood flooring on concrete, it has to be an engineered, as it can be glued together. This problem this type of install. You will need a moisture barrier as well, and usually some type of pad for the floor, to give support for some hard and moisture.

Laminate flooring can be installed right to the concrete. There are different types of Laminate. Some need to be glued, some can be laid. If you have a lot of moisture, the glue may have a tendency to drip or if you don't seal them when coming across the base. Try seal to install. If you don't seal them, you will have a lot of moisture.

Good luck with the choices you make for your home. Always consult with someone before choosing a product or installing it.

CAN I STILL EXERCISE WITH OSTEOARTHRITIS IN MY KNEES?

The old adage, "Move it or lose it," applies especially to people with osteoarthritis.

Regardless of most limitations, physical activity is important for overall health. While the condition of arthritis itself can be disabling it is important to realize that the joint can become even more mobile without regular exercise. Without exercise a vicious cycle can start moving from pain to loss of ability to move.

Years ago, arthritis was treated with rest and immobilization (pain management). Society has since learned that locking up the joint actually makes them worse. There are low-impact exercises of which exercises to do to increase mobility and which to avoid that can make things worse. Any exercises that impact load the joints (high impact) MUST be avoided. Running, jumping, sports, high impact aerobics, or too many any activity where, at any given time you have both feet off the ground - however briefly it is allowed.

That still leaves a lot of activities that are OK for people with knee osteoarthritis and that can help keep you mobile. There are three key areas you need to focus on: weight-bearing/aerobic/cardiovascular activity, to keep your bones strong and your heart healthy; muscle strengthening activity, to relieve stress on the joints; and flexibility and range of motion, to help prevent falls and keep your joints mobile. Swimming, cycling, and walking are all great choices for exercise. And keep lifting weights! It is important to keep all the muscles & tissues around the knee strong and supported. Also raising some exercises for flexibility and range of motion of the knee joint in a gentle and controlled manner will help reduce the pain and help. Visit a qualified personal trainer or physiotherapist for exercise specific to your ability and comfort level. Monica

HOW DOES MY AIR CONDITIONER WORK AND WHAT COULD CAUSE IT NOT TO BLOW AS COLD AS IT ONCE DID?

The A/C system is made up of a compressor, condenser and an evaporator. The system is filled with refrigerant that is compressed by the compressor which gives it a higher pressure. The refrigerant then flows through the condenser, usually situated in front of the radiator. In the condenser the refrigerant is cooled by the air flowing through the condenser and is condensed into a liquid. The condensed, pressurized liquid is then moved through a small opening called an expansion valve or orifice where it undergoes a sudden drop in pressure. This causes a reduction in temperature. The cold refrigerant is then sent through the evaporator which is located in the passenger compartment. Air from the house has blown across the evaporator cooling the air coming out of the vents and cooling the inside of the vehicle.

So now we know the basic operation of an A/C system. Some of the things that could cause the air not to be as cold are if the air flow through the condenser is restricted. This can be either from the outside with the fins being bent or plugged with debris, or from the inside with the filter being dirty or plugged with debris. Both would cause an air restriction through the condenser and affect the cooling. A restricted expansion valve or orifice tube will also affect the cooling process. Another item to check regularly is the cabin air filter, which if restricted will affect air flow out of the vents. A low refrigerant charge can also affect the output of the A/C system. For your A/C needs see our service department.

WHAT IS FIRESMART?

FireSmart is living with and managing fire risk on our landscape.

Preparing for the threat of wildfire is a shared responsibility. From home owners, to industry and government we all have responsibility to lessen the effects of wildfire. Wildland Urban Interface is a popular term used to describe an area where structures and forested areas meet. Simply put, Wildland Urban Interface is where the urban lifestyle meets environments that are prone to wildfire. By choosing to extend our lifestyle and communities further into forested areas, we become more exposed to the danger of wildfire.

Protecting your home from wildfire starts with simple actions. Whether you are doing regular yard maintenance or making large scale changes during renovations or landscaping, you can make choices that will help protect your home from wildfire.

Know your hazard, take the assessment. Knowing the factors that can pose a threat to your home, yard and beyond can empower you to make choices that will reduce the risk.

Complete the structure and site hazard assessment to understand hazard within 30 meters of a house or building.

Take the area hazard assessment to understand the hazard greater than 30 meters of a house or building.

These assessments can be found at www.firemartcanada.ca

IS THIS A BUG BITE?

Jennifer Winter
Pharmacist

This time of year brings sunshine, holidays, and camping. But unfortunately this extra time outdoors also causes the inevitable... BUG BITES! There are different types of insect bites and it is useful to know what kind of bite you might have and how to treat it. Mosquito bites are most common and are usually red, raised itchy bumps. Bites from black flies or horseflies usually look similar to mosquito bites, but can be larger and more painful. Fleas bites usually appear in clusters or lines around the ankles. Bed bugs bites are often located in rows, but are still red and itchy. It's also important to check yourself for ticks after outdoor activities. Most bites can be treated by applying cold compresses or an over-the-counter itch cream such as hydrocortisone or calamine. If a person has severe itching, they can try an oral antihistamine on the advice of a health care professional. Most importantly, if a bite looks like it could be infected (spreading redness, warmth, or pain) it is important to see your doctor. If you appear to be having a severe allergy with hives and excessive swelling, immediately proceed to the ER.

Evolving Community – How to live to 100

There are so many conflicting ideas out there about health and wellness. Almost every day, there's a new "health fad": a new diet, a new detox program, a new short-cut for you to look younger and feel better.

But what do the facts say? Every "health fad" probably has merit for somebody. But the problem is that every body is different, and something that works for one person won't necessarily work for the next. The main thing is to listen to your own body, rather than the latest health expert or news reports. However, there is one pretty sure-fire way to discover what truly leads to great health, and that's by looking at those who live longest.

I recently read a book entitled "The Blue Zones" by Dan Buettner. The book started as an article for National Geographic, but the study was so fascinating that it turned into a full book. The author visited the communities in the world that have a number of centenarians (people who live to 100 years or longer) to discover how they did it, and what they all have in common. While lifestyles varied, there were a number of similarities between the "groups," which allowed me to put together a sort of "recipe for longevity." On top of living a long life, none of these people were using anything to help them walk, and none of them were losing their mind. They generally died in their sleep without disease or any health issues. I'd like to note that one of these groups lives in the United States. So here you are, my recipe for longevity, based on "The Blue Zones" by Dan Buettner.

1. Be active. Constantly. Most of the centenarians were very hard workers (physical labour), but not all. 2. Surround yourself with people. Friends, neighbours, family. All these centenarians had many close friendships and close relationships with their families. They spent time with many people every day. 3. Be mostly vegetarian, eat only natural and healthy, and don't eat meat only occasionally, and didn't eat large quantities of food. (Eating slowly helps with this.)

4. Eat nuts and legumes regularly. 5. Eat your large meals for breakfast and lunch. None of these centenarians ate heavy dinners, or much at all late in the day. 6. Drink (only) one drink every day. Dark red wine or hard liquor are best. 7. Relax. Don't be too much on the go, and avoid stress. 8. Have a life purpose. Something to get up for every day. Something that gives back to the world or your community. 9. Be warm and friendly. 10. Never stop learning. All of these people over 100 were very sharp of mind, and this comes through continually learning new things. 11. Drink organic herbal teas. Rotate varieties every day. 12. Have a faith, even if it doesn't have a name. All these people believe in some sort of higher power. 13. Surround yourself with people who conform with your healthy way of living.

So there you have it, the recipe for living a long and healthy life. Easy, right? (Danette Moulé is the Sustainability Co-ordinator at Town of Drayton Valley)

Federal money okayed for infrastructure projects in Yellowhead riding

Special to the Western Review

EDSON: Jim Eglinak, Member of Parliament for Yellowhead, is pleased to announce that the Government of Canada and Alberta are providing funding for five infrastructure projects in his riding under the New Building Canada Plan's Small Communities Fund.

Funding for these projects will help communities in Yellowhead improve drinking water and wastewater systems, and solid waste management. Once complete, the work will significantly improve key municipal services for residents and help boost regional development.

The Small Communities Fund is part of the $10-billion Provincial/Territorial Infrastructure Component of the New Building Canada Fund. It is providing $1 billion to municipalities with fewer than 100,000 residents for priority public infrastructure projects that deliver on local needs. These investments support job creation and economic growth, thus sustaining a high quality of life in small communities across Alberta for years to come.

"The 56 projects approved for funding in Alberta include 24 drinking water projects, 24 wastewater projects, 4 major road projects, 2 disaster mitigation projects, 1 public transit project and 1 solid waste management project."

For Alberta is $94,191,338. "Our government is proud to be making unprecedented investments in public infrastructure across Alberta. Through the federal Small Communities Fund, we will help get 56 projects going across the province to help improve drinking water, handle wastewater more effectively, make solid waste management better, improve public transit, and upgrade disaster mitigation," said The Honourable Jason Kenney, Minister of National Defence, Minister for Multiculturalism and Member of Parliament for Calgary Southeast.

The Alberta government is committed to making life better for Albertans. Contributing to the development of critical infrastructure that provides clean water, safe roads and effective transit are just a few of the ways we can help build strong communities. We are pleased to partner on the Small Communities Fund and help some of our smallest municipalities," stated The Honourable Derron Bilous, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Minister of Service Alberta.

"Our government is proud to invest in projects like the ones announced in my riding in Yellowhead. Through the New Building Canada Plan's Small Communities Fund, we are investing in priority infrastructure projects that have a positive and lasting impact on the quality of life of Alberta's residents while helping create jobs and economic growth," concluded MP Eglinak.

Allocated money will go toward Drayton Valley South Sanitary Trunk Sewer Twinning at a cost of $9,128,125.

Slow pitch team wins Nationals in Kamloops

Cathy Weeman
Western Review

A dream for a coach and a slow pitch team from Drayton Valley finally came true over the August long weekend when the 8's slow pitch team won Division II Nationals in Kamloops.

"I have coached the KP family for many years and the team has gone to the nationals a few times, but have never won it," explained coach and player Cindy Bogart. "This year the KP dream has come true. We came up against the boys from Saskatoon for the third time in the tournament, with KP beating them every time. KP had to go into extra innings in two separate games to win the Nationals this year, and went undefeated throughout the whole tournament with a 7-0 record. I am very proud of each and every one of them."

Bogart added the team also received MVP Awards - Jolene Bogart for the Female MVP and Keaton Melville for the Male MVP.

"I am very proud of this team and their accomplishments," added Bogart.

Healthy hikes at ski trails

By Linda MacKinnon

Dodge diabetes, strengthen your heart, lower your risk of cancers and more by - walking! Lace up your hiking boots or sneakers and join this FREE group for a refreshing walk on the beautiful Rotary Trails on the east side of Drayton Valley.

We have beautiful walking trails here that are really underused. Part of the reason is that people don't like the thought of walking alone on the trails and especially for any distance because of the fear of animal encounters. Some of the other reasons are: fear of getting injured, maybe rolling an ankle etc. and/or becoming stranded or even getting lost. And of course, so many just don't like to walk on their own. With 'Healthy Hikes' most of those excuses are dissolved. You can come out and reconnect with nature, de-stress, socialize, up your fitness level and join in our never-ending conversation on birds, plants, flowers, bugs, berries, and what ever else presents itself that day.

Generally we cover between 3-8 kms per day. You don't need to be a group person - you can just come out and join the hike at your own pace in your own space! Do you need to be fit to join? No, but you should be able to walk without pain. Trekking poles are great for those with knee issues or osteoarthritis as it allows some of the weight bearing to come off the knees and also adds to some upper body conditioning. This is an adult group and welcomes everyone who could benefit in some way from getting out and back to nature. It is also a seasonal program converting to 'snowshoeing' in the winter. Mondays & Wednesdays from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. we meet at the trail head. There are stroller friendly trails although the chariot type stroller is the best for trails. Dogs on leashes are also welcome, plus it helps of course if your dog is social!

What to bring! (Of course some of this depends on the weather / season)
Hiking 'socks or sneakers; Layers; synthetic hydration system; Trekking Poles, Hat/Cap; Gloves; Bandana; Rain Jacket; Suncscreen; Bug Spray; Lip Balm; Camera/Phone; Whistle; Bearspray; Kleenex.

Happy trails!

Securing Harvest Fuel Needs

Now is a good time to secure harvest fuel needs.

"Harvest is the highest fuel demanding time of the year," says Todd Bergen-Henengouwen, project assistant Alberta Agriculture and Forestry, Edmonton. "As such, it's a good idea to secure your diesel fuel supply just in case there is a fuel shortage."

Scotford Manufacturing Centre northeast of Fort Saskatchewan. "This maintenance has left the company looking for other sources of fuel for its customers. Some Shell locations have been struggling to find fuel over the last few weeks, while others have been unaffected. It's uncertain how long this outage will last, and no indication if a diesel shortage will occur or not," Bergen-Henengouwen says fuel prices in the Edmonton region are lower this year than last. "Last year at the end of July, diesel fuel was at about $1.20 per litre, while this year it's closer to 97 cents per litre. This means if you spent $50,000 on fuel over last year, you'd be spending $10,000 less this year for fuel." Bergen-Henengouwen says the drop in oil prices has contributed to lower diesel costs

"However since fuel is priced in U.S. dollars, the weak Canadian dollar does support higher diesel prices, and demand will increase during harvest. As such we could see an increase in fuel costs this fall."

RCMP Report on Collisions over the August Long Weekend

Story submitted

The number of Motor Vehicle Collisions (MVC) for the 2015 August Long Weekend in Alberta were down compared to the total number for the same period in 2014 reported within RCMP jurisdiction.

A total of 284 MVCs were reported to the Alberta RCMP over this past long weekend, compared to 304 collisions in 2014.

Those MVCs involving at least one injury saw a slight increase this past weekend to 45 collisions, that was an increase from 43 injury collisions for the August Long Weekend in 2014.

The August Long Weekend in 2014 and in 2015 both saw three collisions which resulted in three fatalities.

Two of this past weekend's fatalities occurred in rural locations and one was on a highway. Of this year's three motor vehicle collision fatalities, one involved a motorcycle.

Motorcycle collisions which resulted in an injury or fatality were up this past weekend over the same holiday weekend last year: 12 motorcycles in 2015 compared to 7 in 2014.

So far, 5 people have been arrested and/or charged in relation to the 48 injury/fatal collisions.

The August Long Weekend, for the purposes of collecting this information, was considered to be from Friday, July 31, 2015 to Monday, August 3, 2015.

At the time of writing, statistics pertaining to impaired driving offenses for the 2015 August Long Weekend were not available as they were still being compiled.

Seeding the future of your farm

[NC] All business owners need to constantly be thinking about the next steps for their venture. This not only means looking into innovation and staying power, but also considering and finding a successor to take over.

According to the 2015 Canadian Agricultural Outlook Survey, one-third of respondents indicate that they will need to do those expecting to transfer to family members or partners. Surprisingly, only 30% of these farm owners are doing any formal succession planning.

"We know farmers are so busy with their day-to-day work that it can be difficult to imagine a day when they won't be farming," says Gwen Paddock, national director of agriculture at RBC. "But we also know that having a well thought-out succession plan will help with a seamless transition, and will provide the means for today's farmers to enjoy their retirement."

To help prepare a succession plan Paddock suggests to:

- Plan ahead: Begin planning at least five years in advance of when you think you might sell your farm. This will help to better handle any bumps along the way.
- Share your plan: Involve key family members or partners - especially those you are considering passing the farm to - and do so early during planning.
- Stay objective: While passing on the farm to family is a nice idea, it's not without challenges. For instance, does the successor have the right skills and drive to take over? How will other workers react? Be prepared to answer these questions.

- Seek out experts: Financial advisors and accountants have expertise that can be invaluable during the planning process. Not only will they help you stay objective, but they will also guide you through topics such as taxes and wills. More information is available at www.rcbroyalbank.com/commercial/agriculture.

Three new benefits for Canadian Armed Forces personnel and Veterans

Submitted by Jim Eglinaki

The Retirement Income Security Benefit, the Family Caregiver Relief Benefit, and the Critical Injury Benefit for Canadian Armed Forces personnel, Veterans and their families, went into effect on July 1, 2015.

The Retirement Income Security Benefit will provide moderately to severely disabled military Veterans with continued assistance in the form of a monthly income support pay ment beginning at age 65. The Family Caregiver Relief Benefit will provide Armed Forces Veterans with a tax-free annual grant of $7,238, allowing their informal caregivers some relief when they need it, while also ensuring that the Veteran's care needs are being met.

The Critical Injury Benefit will provide a $70,000 tax-free payment to recognise and compensate severely injured or ill Canadian Armed Forces personnel and Veterans.

The Retirement Income Security Benefit will ensure that an eligible military Veteran's total annual income is at least 70% of what he or she received in financial benefits from Veterans Affairs Canada before age 65.

The Family Caregiver Relief Benefit will provide funds to be used for a wide range of relief options such as covering the cost of having a professional caregiver come into the home or covering the cost for another family member or friend to travel to the Armed Forces Veteran's home.

The Critical Injury Benefit is being paid to eligible Canadian Armed Forces personnel and military Veterans who have suffered a service-related sudden traumatic injury or developed an acute disease and works in concert with existing services and benefits so that there is a continuum of support from the onset of a traumatic injury or disease.

These benefits are part of the Government of Canada's response to the June 2014 House Standing Committee report on Veterans Affairs on the New Veterans Charter. These benefits are in addition to other enhancements of benefits for part-time Reserve Force personnel, expanded eligibility criteria for the Permanent Impairment Allowance, and the hiring of new case managers and additional staff for disability benefits, previously announced by the Minister.

Solve FOMO at school with money management tips

FOMO or "Fear of Missing Out" is a fun social media term, but when it comes to pressures on the wallet during back to school time, FOMO looms large for both students and parents - but in a much different way. For students, it's the fear of missing out on trips or activities with their friends. For parents, it's making sure their children don't miss out on making good decisions. So how are these interests balanced?

"With back-to-school approaching, it is a good time for each party to have a conversation about needs versus wants," says Mandy Mail, director of student banking at RBC Royal Bank. "FOMO has very real effects on student budgets, but setting priorities can mean smart choices and great results."

Mandy offers the following tips to help students meet both the needs and wants.

• Make a list - Put down all of your needs such as books, food, and transportation plus the associated costs. Separately, create a column for 'wants' like clothing, trips, or a new computer. Pick a few items on the wants list that fit into your budget and create a savings plan to tackle others.

• Evaluate your choices - If you're considering a trip over spring break that maybe doesn't quite fit the budget, weigh both sides of the equation and make a decision that fits with your current and future needs.

• Shop smart - If you're on a budget, one way to avoid missing out is comparing prices. You may even be able to add in another want to your wish list. Shop responsibly and buy based on need, not just want.

• Get the most out of your credit card - Find a credit card that suits your needs. For example, there are credit cards that offer cashback options which allow you to earn cash on your everyday purchases. There are also cards that let you earn and redeem points for gift cards and merchandise.

Space saving solutions for a small kitchen

For many Canadian families the kitchen is the heart of the home. It's a place where everyone comes together after a busy day to cook, eat delicious food and bond. However, for many homeowners and city dwellers too many cooks in the kitchen can be an issue for those with limited counter space and small prep areas. This is why making the most of every square inch is crucial.

The experts at Blanco, world leader in kitchen technology, have some advice on how to make the best of any small kitchen without sacrificing function or style.

Choose multipurpose products
For homeowners who don't have the luxury of a wide-eyed counter, products that do double duty can be a smart way to save space and increase efficiency in your kitchen. Blanco's Precise W/ Drainboard Silestone sink includes a grid tray and offers an optional cutting board that slides over the sink or drainboard allowing for a distinctly functional work space. The grid tray acts as a multifunctional sink accessory that can hold hot pots, pans and dishes not only on the sink surface but also on the kitchen counter, and can even double as a trivet on a dining table. The Blanco Precise collection is made of Blanco Silestone - Canada's leading coloured sink material that offers exceptional strength, durability and innovative designs.

Think about smart installation
Products that combine style and functionality are the ultimate way to maximize use of your kitchen. With its chip angular design, durable uniquely shaped work surface, and integrated stainless steel grid, the Blanco Precise W/ Drainboard sink offers the perfect way to free up space on your counter and capitalize on every possible inch. It also features a compact, practical, single-bowl design that is suitable for small kitchens. It can be installed as a vapourour or as an undermount so you have the option to conceal the edges of the sink and achieve an attractive minimalist look that's easy to clean - the ideal way to reclaim important workspace on your countertops.

Don't sacrifice style

The biggest misconception that people have when renovating a small space is thinking that they can't incorporate style. In fact, just the opposite is true. Colour can be the ultimate way to add individuality by making either a bold or subtle statement. The Blanco Precise W/ Drainboard sink is available in six elegant finishes, such as anthracite, crystal, café, truffle, white and the latest trendy colour, metallic gray, to suit any décor personality. Furthermore, Blanco Silestone sinks can be colour-matched with selected Blanco faucets for a unified look in the kitchen.

Conserve Counter

One of the greatest culprits in the kitchen for taking up space is the clutter that builds up on work surfaces. Try trendy organizational space savers like mesh baskets, colanders or trays to group things together but keep them out of the way while you're working. They can even act as a decorative approach to help your kitchen func-

What to expect when buying a new home

Not buying a brand new home is a milestone that can signify the start of a new chapter in a person's life. But before you can begin to enjoy it, there are steps you must take to help ensure your new homeownership experience goes smoothly.

Do your "home" work

All new home builders in Ontario must be registered with Tarion and provide a seven year warranty on every home they build. Tarion regulates new home builders in Ontario and backs up the warranty. The Ontario Builder Directory, available on tarion.com, lists all registered builders in Ontario. If your builder is not listed in this directory, it may be because they did not pass the technical test based on the Ontario Building Code regulations or provide the financial securities mandated to build homes in Ontario - and they are building illegally. Before you sign your purchase agreement or enter into a contract with a builder, make sure they are registered and provide you with the necessary warranty.

Hire a lawyer when signing your purchase agreement

Once you've decided on the right home, your builder will ask you to sign an agreement of purchase and sale. Before you do, make sure you understand the terms of the deal you are signing, what is and isn't included in the price, and when your closing date will be. It is also important to check that anything promised by your sales representative is reflected in writing. This includes any upgrades you've agreed on. Purchase agreements are typically very lengthy and can be hard to understand. Invest in a lawyer to thoroughly review the documents. He or she will act in your best interest and work with you and the builder to ensure you understand what you are signing.

Inspect your new home carefully

Before you move in, your builder is required to take you through a pre-delivery inspection, also known as a PDI. Look for any issues that are incomplete, damaged, missing, or not operating properly and make sure your builder notes them on the PDI form. Take pictures of any damaged or incomplete items. If necessary, those photos can be submitted to Tarion at a later date.

Read up on the warranty

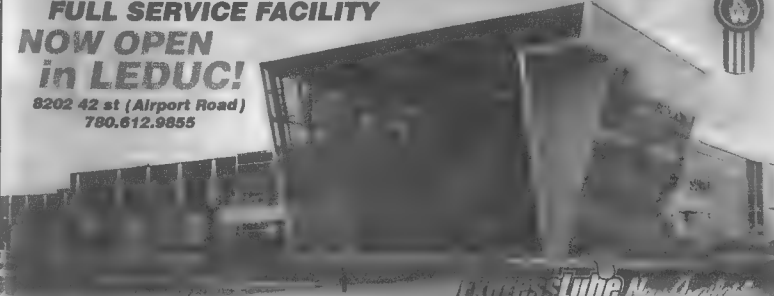

Every new home built in Ontario comes with warranty coverage that is provided by the builder and backed by Tarion. In addition to deposit coverage and delayed closing compensation, there are also three separate warranties on new homes. These include a one year, two year and seven year warranty for things like: an authorized subcontractor of items agreed to in the purchase agreement, defects in the electrical, plumbing and heating systems, issues with water penetration, violations of the Ontario Building Code, and coverage for major structural defects. Your builder should be providing you with a Homeowner Information Package before you take possession with detailed information about the warranty. It is also available at www.tarion.com.

Asking questions at the end of an interview is important

Dear Working Wue:
I've gone to a few job interviews lately and I have not been sure what to say when the interviewers ask me if I have any questions. Should I have any questions? Do you have any suggestions? Signed, Unsure

Many interviewers will ask you near the end of the interview if you have any questions. If you say no, you are missing an opportunity to make a positive impression on the employer.

1. Make a positive impression on the employer.
2. Decide if this job is a good fit for you.

3. Use the information to summarize why you're the best candidate for the job.
Research the company and the position before the interview and write a list of two or three questions. Coming to the interview with questions shows the employer that you are serious about the position and confident enough to ask questions.

Questions you might want to ask:
What are the organization's biggest challenges?
How would the person in this position be involved in meeting these challenges?

What are the company's long-range plans?
How would you describe the ideal candidate?

What immediate tasks will the successful candidate be working on?

What skills do you think are most critical to success in this role?

What do employees enjoy most about working here?

What key attitudes does the organization look for in the people it hires?
How is success measured in this company?
How would you describe the culture of this organization?

These types of questions demonstrate your interest in the position and the answers will help tell you which of your strengths you should mention at the end of the interview.

Bring a pen and pad of paper to the interview and take notes on anything you want to ask about later in the interview.

When the employer invites you to ask questions, quickly review your list and ask questions that haven't already been answered or need clarification. Ask your most important questions first and pay attention to the interviewer's non-verbal cues after each question to ensure they are comfortable being asked another question.

Experts usually recommend not asking about salary unless the employer mentions it first. You want the employer to know that you are most interested in how you can benefit the organization. Waiting until you have a job offer also puts you in a stronger bargaining position. Use your discretion—if you're curious and it seems appropriate, ask.

Listen carefully to what the interviewer has to say and take notes. Use what you have learned during the interview to create a short summary of your most relevant skills and qualifications.

At the end of your interview, restate your interest in the position along with a summary of your key skills that show you would be a great fit.

For more tips on job interviews, visit the Alberta Learning Information Service (ALIS) web site at www.alis.alberta.ca.

Good luck in your next interview!

Do you have a work related question? Send your questions to Working Wue, at charles.strachan@alberta.ca. Charles Strachan is a regional manager with Alberta Human Services. This column is provided for general information.

Job interviews are an opportunity for interviewees to ask questions and get to know the company as much as it is a chance for the employers to get to know their prospective employees.

Three tips to prevent accidents on the road

(NC) Driving has become second nature to many of us and many times we don't think twice about potential distractions. Cell phones are a major distraction and the fines are getting steeper to deter people from texting or making phone calls while driving. There are other distractions that you might not think of when in your car for long or even short distances.

The fines for distracted driving are now more than $500, but that's not the only cost.

According to Transport Canada, Alberta has the highest percentage of drivers using cell phones compared to other provinces. And the RCMP tells us that in 80 per cent of collisions, the driver took their eyes off the road for at least three seconds.

Blake Reichert, vice-president of the Pacific Region for Western Financial Group wants people to remember that distracted driving increases the risk of accidents, ranging from fender benders to more serious crashes. "When people drive distracted, they are increasing their risk," says Reichert. He compares it like putting your phone away when you are driving or pulling over to get some sleep can greatly reduce your risk of accidents and therefore reduce the need for claims.

Here are some tips to ensure that you get to your destination safely:

- Put your cell phone away: Using a cell phone while driving is a distraction. It can be tempting to check that text or email or answer the phone while you are driving so keep the phone out of sight and on silent.

distracted, you can simply pull over if it is safe to do so. If you are in the city, pulling into a parking lot to make a phone call, adjust your GPS, or use any other electronic device is a good practice.

Get some rest: If you have to head out for a long drive, make sure you get a good night's sleep beforehand. If you start to feel drowsy, pull over in a rest area and close your eyes until you feel more alert.

With all of the distractions in today's world and the multitude of devices available in cars, it can be hard to focus on just driving. But not doing so can cost you in fines, accident claims and other more serious outcomes. Take precautions to ensure that you are alert behind the wheel at all times.

Tips for success when buying a used car

(NC) There are several claims you might hear when buying a used vehicle. "It hardly been driven," or "The tires are brand new," but how do you know what is

Don't end up spending more time at the mechanic than on the road. The auto insurance experts at ingenie, which offers telematics-based auto insurance for Quanto drivers used 16-24, provide the following tips for purchasing a used car:

1. Do your research: You've seen the ads, you like the pictures, but before you contact the seller, do an Internet search of the car's make and model. Is it a gas-guzzler? What will it cost to insure? This background will help you ask the right questions when you meet the seller and will prepare you to bargain for the right price.

2. Check out the seller: You should be comfortable with the person you're dealing with for the transaction. Most of us buy cars from strangers or dealers, so watch for suspicious warning signs to make sure you're dealing with an honest seller. These can include an ad that's been up for too long or pushy, aggressive dealership staff.

3. Ask questions: Beyond "Why are you selling this car?" asking some questions can help you understand how the seller treated their car. "Where and when did you buy this car?" This will tell you if there have been previous owners and a bit more about the car's history. "Can I get an independent inspection?" If they agree, get

4. Check the paperwork: Make sure the seller's name and address match the car's registration info. You do not want a stolen car. And finally, once you've bought it, remember Ontario gives you only six days to register the used car in your name.
